Linking of Military and Commercial Activities in Europe Spurs Industry

Washington, Dec. 8.—Lack of an adequate aircraft industry is a matter of grave concern to the government, in the judgment of the national advisory committee for aeronautics, as discussed in its annual report to Congress transmitted by President Coolidge.

"An aircraft industry is absolutely essential to national defense," the report declared. "One lesson of the war that will not be forgotten is that it takes a great deal of money to develop rapidly an aircraft industry from almost nothing. The American people can ill afford to pay that price a second time. The government is concerned that there should be an adequate nucleus capable of rapid expansion to meet war needs. To that end it recommended steps to remedy substantially the existing bad condition" but declared that proposals either to increase the volume of government orders for aircraft or to allot such orders without regard to competitive bidding would not meet the necessity.

The committee suggested four moves to produce the necessary types of aircraft at reduced cost, and also to assure manufacturers of adequate peace-time markets. The steps to be taken by the aircraft builders were to readjust plans to a peacetime basis immediately and for specialization in particular types of ships with a view to gradual recognition of rights in new designs.

The steps to be taken by the aircraft builders were to readjust plans to a peacetime basis immediately and for specialization in particular types of ships with a view to gradual recognition of rights in new designs.

RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

Plans suggested for the government were to fix a balanced production program for the army, navy and the postoffice will have needs and types made known a year in advance and to place orders for different kinds of types "at such intervals" to assure continuity of production and the development of special facilities and skill by each manufacturer in the production of each type of aircraft.

While the air mail service, particularly with its present efforts to "ward night flying," was classed as "the most important development in aviation today" so far as stimulating development of commercial aviation goes, the report pointed out that the chief reason for faster commercial flying progress in Europe was a military consideration.

"They realize more keenly than we in America the vital necessity of aviation to national defense," the committee said, "adding that commercial aviation had been encouraged overseas."

As general recommendations the board suggested:

The continuous prosecution of scientific research work.

Continuation of the air mail service under the postoffice department with the ground equipped for night flying from New York to San Francisco.

Steps to increase the reliability and operation of commercial aircraft with reasonable regulation of flyers and flying fields and necessary aids navigation along designed national airways.

Continued study of the air defense problem and continued support of aviation development in the army and navy.

In transmitting the report, President Coolidge concurred in the general recommendations.

Later press dispatches have tended to throw a veil of mystery over the exact manner in which Dayton was shot, as well as the death of the young woman. The State Department has sent instructions to Consul Patton to make a complete investigation and report as soon as possible.

Presumably the body of the victim will be returned to the United States for burial.

The tragedy occurred when Kemp, driver of the car in which the four men injured were riding, attempted to pass the machine driven by Irish.

Both cars were traveling west toward Hibbing. In his attempt Kemp struck the Lang car, which was coming from the opposite direction, toward Virginia, resulting in a head-on collision which threw the Lang car from the road, according to reports received here.

The force of the collision demolished the Lang car, causing instant death to three members of the Lang family.

MUCH LUMBER IS USED FOR CHRISTMAS

Santa Claus and Assistants Have Used 30,000,000 Board Feet of Lumber

Washington, Dec. 8.—For the first time Santa Claus has been reported to have worked for the year, after cutting more than 30,000,000 board feet of lumber into the various shapes demanded by the rules of the game. There are nearly 100 establishments in the United States taking orders from Santa Claus. One manufacturer of toys in New York state uses 2,000,000 feet of lumber every year and the total value of the products of the industry in all parts of the United States reaches $35,000,000.

That takes a tremendous number of trees, the American Tree Association points out in a bulletin calling attention to argument for reforestation.

These commercial Santa Clauses, the toy makers, ply their trade largely in the east, New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan are the states in which the bulk of the industry is located. As forest resources have been gradually used up in the east, however, the manufacturers have had to depend upon timber brought from the west and the south.

Wheat Situation

The outstanding event in the agricultural history of 1924 has been the wheat situation, the report said. Apparent supplies of bread grains have been much reduced, and the world's crop promises to be between 300,000,000 and 350,000,000 bushels below that of last year. Exportable supplies in the principal producing countries have been reduced and requirements of the importing countries have been increased. The demand for wheat from the United States should be stronger than it was last year. Wheat promises large yields per acreage. Reduced yields in foreign countries have brought a market situation in which the American farmers are receiving higher prices for a larger crop. Nevertheless, the rise in the price of wheat has not yet sufficed to give a cash balance (Continued on page 2)

ANNUAL REPORT ASSESS STATUS BEST SINCE '20

Gross Income Is Estimated at $500,000,000 Above Last Year

NEED FOR MORE GAINS

Purchasing Power Still Held 18 Per Cent Under Pre-War Level

Washington, Dec. 8.—American agriculture, on the whole, occupies the best position it has held since 1920 but much further recovery is required to bring it back to its pre-war condition, the Agriculture Department informed President Coolidge today in its annual report. The report was prepared by the late Henry C. Wallace and embodies his views, but was signed and presented by the present Secretary, Howard M. Gore, who was assistant secretary under Mr. Wallace.

"Prospects are that the gross income from agricultural production for the crop year 1924-25 may reach approximately $1,000,000,000, compared with $1,500,000,000 in 1923-24 and $950,000,000 in 1921-22," said the report. "A favorable readjustment has taken place in price ratios between agriculture and industry. While the purchasing power of farm products is 18 percent below the pre-war level, it is 16 percent above the index for May, 1921, when the depression was in its worst period. This year's harvest was the finest in five years. Though not the greatest in volume of products, it was the best balanced and represented the best income."

"Yet it would be a mistake to conclude that the American farmer is done with the troubles of the depression period. If the readjustment is left to blind economic forces it will be many years before that can be said. Although farm commodity price levels are headed toward a better position, they have still a large gain to make before agricultural products will be on a parity with other products. This means that agriculture is still laboring under a heavy disadvantage."

Still In Depression

"The improvement that has taken place has not yet lasted long enough to produce any marked betterment in the finances of the farmer. As a matter of fact, the suffering of many farmers is perhaps as intense today as it was in the first years of the depression period, because the effects of the depression are cumulative. Present favorable possibilities will have to be turned into realities before it can fairly be said that agriculture is enjoying normal prosperity. Nevertheless, the shadow of 1921 hangs over the year 1924."

Though the crop story of 1924 is a happy one for agriculture, as such, the improvement will not be shared by all sections of the farm population," was pointed out. Grain products, it was pointed out, are approximately $200,000,000 more than last year but of this the growers stand to gain only a 15 percent share. Corn growers will have less to sell this year and a whole the Corn Belt will look a depressed returns from higher hog prices. The large cotton crop should enable the South to hold its position relatively satisfactory position. Hitting cotton may not result in a greater income. There is no certain promise of increased income from cattle and sheep production.

"In the main it may be said that the year will bring increased income to the various producing regions, to the Corn Belt, as the report to the 'Nation' states, it is possible to say: 'The cotton crop is considerable and dairy producing states probably will not contribute much to the estimated increase in the gross agriculture income of the year. The increase is $500,000,000 in income this year over last year. Returns on the estimated present value of farm capital from this income, if operating costs were not greater than those of the crop year of 1923, would amount to 3.8 percent. This return is much below the average return to other capital. Income from agriculture has not in any year since the price decline of 1920 sufficed to allow both a commercial return on capital and adequate reward for the farmers' labor, risks and management."

Wheat Situation

The outstanding event in the agricultural history of 1924 has been the wheat situation, the report said. Apparent supplies of bread grains have been much reduced, and the world's crop promises to be between 300,000,000 and 350,000,000 bushels below that of last year. Exportable supplies in the principal producing countries have been reduced and requirements of the importing countries have been increased. Reduced yields in foreign countries have brought a market situation in which the American farmers are receiving higher prices for a larger crop. IN NO MAN'S SEA

BY M. J. ACKERMAN
NEA Service Photographer

New York, Dec. 8.—Picture a tossing infinity of frigid black water beneath a cloudy sky-dome filled with snow, sleet, rain and moaning wind gusts.

This is the North Atlantic in November, where the 42-foot Liev Eriksson is lost.

Into this overpowering, fearsome, fascinating scene, I went on the cruiser Trenton on its 11-day search for the little sailboat and its crew of adventurers.

To the experienced officers and men of the Trenton the trip was simply an item in their job, a cruise into whatever the storm gods might send, an occasion for using their seamanship and dead-end of sight.

But to this landlubber it was a succession of hairbreadth escapes, providential rescues, wild adventures. And to have found the Liev Eriksson would have appeared a miracle.

The Trenton sailed from New York toward the banks of Newfoundland, took up the search there into the middle of the ocean, circled southward to check up the report of a derelict, crossed the warm blue river of the Gulf Stream and returned empty-handed.

The Liev Eriksson, bearing W. W. Nutting and his party, had sailed from Greenland early in September, headed for Labrador on the last leg of their voyage across the Atlantic. If they had been lost or disabled, the natural drift of the currents in that region would have carried them in a southeasterly course. Their rate would have been about 21 miles a day. Our course, therefore, was a double intersection of the track their boat might have been expected to follow.

Except for about three days of our trip we were continuously buffeted by storms.

By the time we reached Fire Island, four hours out from New York, the Trenton was being hammered. She was built for speed, a sort of magnified destroyer, about 550 feet long with only 55 feet beam.

Down those mountainous slopes of the deep raced our ship to bury her nose in the face of the steep up-curve of water at the foot. Or a tremendous surge would catch us amidships on its peak, the stern with its four propellers kicking out into air, the ship throbbing and straining but always driving forward and up-right. Or the choppy billows would bombard us from all directions, hitting us when down, pounding us and rattling us like dice in a cup.

And at the depth of some such experience, with the deck slanting at a 45-degree angle, some humorous sailor would grunt to the landlubber: "I hope she comes back."

She always did.

Worst of all was a hurricane from Cuba which broke at night as we neared the end. Yet we missed the full force of it, for Captain Kalbfus had heeded warnings and altered his course out of its direct sweep.

How a small boat could live in such an ocean seems incomprehensible.

A continuous lookout was kept from the crow's-nest and another from the bridge. Every toss and heave of the ship was magnified for the men at the top of the mast. One man toward the end of his watch got to "seeing derelicts" as a sort of

Sinking of Water-Taxi in Los Angeles Harbor Is Fatal to One

San Pedro, California, Dec. 8.—(By the A. P.) The dead: James Lang, 35, Kin Cross, general laborer for a Hibbing construction company, instant death as a result of fractured skull.

Mrs. James Lang, 22, head severed from body.

Roby Lang, 6 months old daughter, instant death from fractured skull. Died in mother's arms.

The injured, who are being held by police: James Kemp, 35, Kelly Lake, railroad employe.

Edward Kemp, 24, Kelly Lake, railroad employe.

William D. Pariseau, 38, Hibbing, employe of tire repair shop.

Joseph Connaker, 24, Hibbing, clerk in a mine office.

Herbert Irish, Virginia, driver of one of the cars, and George Wold, 14, Virginia, who was riding with the Langs, escaped uninjured.

The tragedy occurred when Kemp, driver of the car in which the four men injured were riding, attempted to pass the machine driven by Irish. Both cars were traveling west toward Hibbing. In his attempt Kemp struck the Lang car, which was coming from the opposite direction, toward Virginia, resulting in a head-on collision in which the four men injured were riding. The force of the collision demolished the Lang car, causing instant death to three members of the Lang family.

Light snow fell in North Dakota over Sunday, and the weather bureau's report indicated snow Tuesday.

COOLIDGE AND UNDERWOOD IN CONFERENCE

Muscle Shoals Proposition of Alabama Senator Is Discussed

Washington, Dec. 8.—President Coolidge is understood to have presented his views on the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill directly to the Alabama Senator during the Sunday cruise on the Mayflower on which Senator Underwood was a guest.

An announcement was made at the White House today, following the President's return that he would send no letter to the Senate setting forth his views as had been expected by Republican Senators.

AMENDMENTS SUGGESTED

Washington, Dec. 8.—Secretary Weeks' report on the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill suggested a number of amendments to the measure and declared that "unless careful and thoughtful amendments such as pointed out in my report are adopted the Underwood bill is unworkable."

MUCH LUMBER IS USED FOR CHRISTMAS

Santa Claus and Assistants Have Used 30,000,000 Board Feet of Lumber

Washington, Dec. 8.—Ten thousand first assistants to Santa Claus have knocked off work for the year, after cutting more than 30,000,000 board feet of lumber into the curious shapes demanded by the rulers of Toyland. There are nearly 400 establishments in the United States taking orders from Santa Claus. One manufacturer today in New York state uses 2,000,000 feet of lumber every year and the total value of the products of the industry in all parts of the United States reaches $36,000,000.

That takes a tremendous number of trees, the American Tree Association points out in a bulletin calling attention to argument for reforestation.

These commercial Santa Clauses, the toy makers, ply their trade largely in the east, New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan are the states in which the bulk of the industry is located. As forest resources have been gradually used up in the east, however, the manufacturers have had to depend upon timber brought from the west and the south.

ANNUAL REPORT ASSERTS STATUS BEST SINCE '20

Gross Income Is Estimated at $500,000,000 Above Last Year

NEED FOR MORE GAINS

Purchasing Power Still Held 18 Per Cent Under Pre-War Level

Washington, Dec. 8.—American agriculture, on the whole, occupies the best position it has held since 1920 but much further recovery is required to bring it back to its pre-war condition, the Agriculture Department informed President Coolidge today in its annual report. The report was prepared by the late Henry C. Wallace and embodies his views, but was signed and presented by the present Secretary, Howard M. Gore, who was assistant secretary under Mr. Wallace.

Prospects are that the gross income from agricultural production for the crop year 1924-25 may reach approximately $12,000,000,000, compared with $11,500,000,000 in 1923-24 and $9,550,000,000 in 1921-22, said the report. "A favorable readjustment has taken place in price ratios between agriculture and industry. While the purchasing power of farm products is 18 percent below the pre-war level, it is 16 percent above the index for May, 1921, when the depression was in its worst period. This year's harvest was the finest in five years. Though not the greatest in volume of products, it was the best balanced and represented the best income."

"Yet it would be a mistake to conclude that the American farmer is done with the troubles of the depression period. If the readjustment is left to blind economic forces it will be many years before that can be said. Although farm commodity price levels are headed toward a better position, they have still a large gain to make before agricultural products will be on a parity with other products. This means that agriculture is still laboring under a heavy disadvantage."

Still Is Depression

"The improvement that has taken place has not yet lasted long enough to produce any marked betterment in the finances of the farmer. As a matter of fact, the suffering of many farmers is perhaps as intense today as it was in the first years of the depression period, because the effects of the depression are cumulative. Present favorable possibilities will have to be turned into realities before it can fairly be said that agriculture may be suffering normally. Nevertheless, the showing of 1924 brings prosperity nearer."

Though the crop story of 1924 spells improvement to agriculture as a whole, the improvement will not be shared by all sections of the farm population, it was pointed out. Grain producers may earn approximately $300,000,000 more than last year but of this the wheat growers stand to gain by far the greater share. Corn growers will have less to sell this year and as a whole the Corn Belt must look for increased returns from higher prices. The large cotton crop should enable the South to hold its relatively satisfactory position. Dairying continues to increase but heavier marketing may not result in a greater income. There is no certain prospect of increased income from cattle and sheep production.

"In the main it may be said that the year will bring increased income to the surplus-producing regions, to the Corn Belt, and possibly to the Cotton States," the report continued. "The tobacco, fruit, vegetable, and dairy producing states probably will not contribute much to the estimated increase in the gross agricultural income of the year. The increase of $500,000,000 in income this year over last year. Returns on the estimated present value of farm capital from this income, if operating costs were not greater than those of the crop year of 1923, would amount to 3.8 percent. This return is much below the average return to other capital. Income from agriculture has not in any year since the price decline of 1920 sufficed to allow both a commercial return on capital and adequate rewards for the farmers' labor, risks and management."

Wheat Situation

The outstanding event in the agricultural history of 1924 has been the wheat situation, the report said. Apparent surpluses of bread grains have been much reduced, and the world's crop promises to be between 300,000,000 and 350,000,000 bushels below that of last year. Exportable surpluses in the principal producing countries have been reduced and requirements of the importing countries have been increased. The demand for wheat from the United States should be stronger than it was last year. Wheat promises large yields per acreage. Reduced yields in foreign countries have brought a market situation in which the American farmers are receiving higher prices for a larger crop. Nevertheless, the price of wheat has not yet sufficed to give a bushel

NEW MISSOURI BRIDGE ASKED

People of Sanish Will Petition For It

Petitions will be presented to the state legislature by people of Sanish, Montana county, and vicinity asking an appropriation be made to assist in a federal state county circular bridge across the Missouri River, it was decided at a meeting held at Sanish, which named a committee to draw up petitions. Those favoring the project hold that it will "open up" McKenzie county to a large territory east of it. The Sanish railroad line now extends as far as Sanish, halting at the Missouri River. McKenzie county, one of the state's largest counties, is not reached by railroad from North Dakota, excepting for a branch which passes through one corner travelers by rail entering the county from Montana.

The Parks Highway route also crosses the river at Sanish. The road is being improved, and next summer the federal government will construct 11 miles of highway across the Ft. Berthold reservation.

The figures represent an increase of 1,225 over the number of arrests by the same agents during the previous year, and 25,938 more than two years ago.

Statistics of arrests for intoxication and other infractions of liquor laws made by state and local authorities were not contained in the report.

Will Patrol Country Roads

Fargo, Dec. 6.—Heads of the federal prohibition offices in North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Nebraska, today were ordered to place automobile patrols on all main highways to stop rum runners who are believed to be preparing to flood those states with holiday liquor, according to Associated Press dispatches from Minneapolis today.

patrols were issued by A. C. Townsend, chief of prohibition enforcement.

"I have been certain for some time," said Mr. Townsend, "that there has been rum running from the town into the Dakotas, particularly out to a lesser degree, in other sections of this division."

"It is certain that there will be a holiday demand for illicit liquor that will exceed the supply and it is our intention to nip the supply at its source by catching the runners and confiscating their liquor and trucks."

ELECTION IN GERMANY DOES NOT CLARIFY

Situation in Reichstag Precludes Three-Party Coalition

Berlin, Dec. 8.—The outcome of yesterday's general elections leaves the parliamentary situation wholly unclarified, as the new party line up in the Reichstag precludes the formation of a three-party coalition composed of the Socialists, the Catholics and the Democrats, in the opinion of political leaders.

According to the latest returns these three parties have elected a total of 227 members of the Reichstag and with only this number to depend upon the leaders fear this liberal combination would be unable to command a dependable majority even if it were given the support of the Bavarian Peoples Party with its 15 votes.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—Thirty years ago Trully Shattuck was the toast of an international stage.

With Lillian Russell, Anna Held and other stars of yesterday, she was a front-row attraction on many Broadway.

But as the years crept on, her svelte-like figure lost its graceful curves. Her waistline jumped from 32 inches to 52. And the scales creaked under the weight of her 202 pounds.

Gone was her fame. Managers started calling her "matronly." Audiences recoiled in glee when she tottered across stage.

She had to take to vaudeville and "smalltime" parts. She even acted a movie burlesque centering its plot about the typical fat woman trying to reduce.

But all the while the footlights faded her. Yet the footlights didn't want her.

"No use," sighed Trully. "I'm done for. Nobody wants a fat lady except the sideshows."

One friend urged her to have the hated fat actually cut off. Truly assented. Anything to lose it.

So Truly came here for the operation. A "watermelon incision" was made in the skin of the abdomen by Dr. Henry J. Schireson. Several other incisions were made around the back and hips.

Lo and behold, 69 pounds of Truly's fat came off! And her double chin was made single and her face was remodeled all over.

Today Truly's waistline is back to 32 inches. She tips the scales at 132. And she does not look a day more than 30, though she is 56.

But she must throw away all her clothes. $8000 worth, she says. Her very best party dress now fits her nearly twice.

"I don't care, though," she laughs. "I'm going back to lick the world. I want life and love and beauty and success once more. It is like being in heaven."

"I hear you, old footlights. And I'm a-comin'."

Off stage Truly's real name is Clarice Eralia de Bucharde.

CAPITAL PHONE SERVICE HIT

Hoie Shot Through Cable Containing Hundred Wires

Telephone service at the state capitol was somewhat interrupted today as a result of someone having shot a hole through the cable containing one hundred wires over which service is furnished. It is presumed that some one was following a more or less favorite pastime of shooting at the glass insulators on the pole and the bullet struck the lead cable instead of the insulator. The result was that about twenty telephones were out of service a part of the day which caused great inconvenience to state officials as well as a considerable amount of expense to the telephone company.

The telephone company reports, however, that damage of this nature is of rather rare occurrence inasmuch as cable is seldom used outside of the more thickly populated parts of a city but in this case it is necessary to furnish the necessary lines to the capitol. The shooting off of the glass insulators in the rural districts is not as common as it was a few years ago and this is greatly appreciated by all telephone companies inasmuch as it often resulted in interrupting the toll and rural service although no doubt the offender thought his act was quite harmless.

New Method Heals Pyorrhea

Ten Years Bad Case Completely Healed in a Short Time Writes Florida Woman.

Facing with the loss of her teeth, after 10 years' suffering, Mrs. M. J. Travis, an esteemed resident of Jacksonville, declares she finally saved her teeth by a single home treatment: "worth its weight in gold," using her own words: "After having pyorrhea for 10 years my mouth is now healed. Before I found out differently, I was told there was no relief and had yielded to the loss of six fine solid teeth. Then I discovered Moore's pyorrhea treatment. Three days after starting its use, the soreness left my gums; my teeth began to tighten. Now my teeth are clean, my breath sweet, and my mouth completely healed."

PEOPLE

Generally believe with us when we say—"The Sale Store policy is wrong." We say "The People generally believe with us," basing our contention on the fact that "actions speak louder than words."

Saturday was the largest men's furnishings sales we have ever made. Many people have told us in plain English that our values are by far the greatest in Bismarck.

HERE IS THE REASON

We have patterned our sales policy of never holding sales from some of the largest men's wear stores in this good old U. S. A. By selecting our stock with great care, buying small lots, eliminating "carry-overs," and selling at the average price FIRST, enables us to give greater values, there-by moving all our stock, without having to hold sales, the customer getting the benefit of the right price at the start of the buying season.

CONVINCE YOURSELF THAT OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT BY SHOPPING AT OTHER STORES FIRST.

MANY SEEK U. S. HOSPITAL

Nearly Every City in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Active

Minneapolis, Dec. 8. Apparently every city, town and hamlet in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, wants the government to establish the proposed tuberculosis hospital for the disabled former service men in their midst. At least that was the impression gained by members of a committee, appointed by the United States Veterans bureau who met here yesterday to open the invitations.

They were confronted with a pile of letters that filled a large table. Every letter was accompanied by maps, photographs and carefully prepared memoranda of the various sites offered.

No decision on the matter will be made until the committee has had an opportunity to carefully consider the offers.

Frequent meetings of the committee will be held until the site is selected.

Dr. Gilbert Seamon, of Milwaukee, is chairman of the committee. Other members were Dr. E. B. Dougherty, of St. Paul; Dr. Walter J. Marley, and Byrd Johnson, of Minneapolis; Boyd Wales, Pierre, S. D., and William Stein, Fargo, N. D.

Next week some of the members of the committee will make a trip to the Iron Range, to look at sites in that territory.

of wheat its pre-war purchasing power. While the wheat situation has greatly improved, it has not yet reached a point where farmers should think no further readjustments are necessary. It would be a mistake to suppose that the wheat acreage may again be expended with the expectation of high prices.

Effect of Taxes

The outlook for cotton is promising. This year's crop should contribute approximately $1,600,000,000 to the purchasing power of the cotton growers. Cotton yields this year have, for a time at any rate, set at rest any fear that American cotton production will not again be able to meet the world demand.

The livestock industry is on a firmer foundation than at any time since the price collapse of 1919-1920, said the report, although 1924 was not a year of good profits for cattle and hog producers. Cattlemen have had a harder time than any other group of livestock producers. Still, but steady livestock has been going on in the cattle industry for three years. Today however many of the war-time loans with high interest rates have been paid. Money is available on more favorable terms, conditions in the cattle country are improving, and the prospective reduction in hog raising should strengthen the market for beef.

Speaking of the tax burden of the farmer, the report said too often the amount of the tax has little or no relation to the amount of the farmer's income, selling values of land which serve as a basis for taxation do not rest only on current earnings but also on anticipation of future earnings. This often means that taxes have to be paid on fictitious value.

TRANSITION OF MISSOURI SLOPE PICTURED BY FORMER RANCH OWNER

Indiana Man, on Visit After 12 Years, Finds Amazing Progress in Territory West of the Missouri River—Sees Great Future For Section

A mental picture of the transition of the Missouri Slope from raw prairie and a land of big cattle and sheep ranches, with no railroads, to a farming country, with railroads, comfortable homes and prosperity, all in a period of 25 years or less, was painted here by William H. Dye of Indianapolis, Indiana, attorney and business man, who was a rancher west of the Missouri River a quarter of a century ago.

Though betraying a sigh for the good old days of the free range, Mr. Dye found the onward march of the Missouri Slope a revelation when he returned last week for a visit after an absence of 12 years. He predicted a great future for the region through diversified farming, but still found a hankering for a cattle ranch, and said that he was again expected to purchase one.

A personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Dye added an enthusiastic urge that the North Dakota Badlands be converted into a government game preserve or national park as a Roosevelt memorial.

THE RANCHING DAYS

Mr. Dye first came to North Dakota in 1897, as an attorney representing an Indiana man who had interests in the territory. Impressed by the freedom of growth of Buffalo grass, Mr. Dye took a trip through southwest North Dakota and was amazed at the opportunities there, he said. He tried to buy land and found it was not surveyed. He leased until he could buy, and then bought two townships in the Wolfe Butte country northwest of where Hettinger now is, and in the northwest corner of the Standing Rock Indian reservation. He leased other land and began ranching, spending the summers here, and usually January and March. He recalled among the ranchers of the day, most of them now gone, Gay Clark of the HIT ranch, Wallace Heidekoper, now in Montana; Fry James Phelan, now at Bowman, and others. He recalled the purchase of Fred Hubst, Milwaukee brewer, of the horse ranch of a Heidekoper. Hubst bought 3,500 horses, but when they were rounded up for the first time in years found he had 6,500 horses. Land on the lower Cannon Ball, where Mr. Dye ranches, sold for $1.25 an acre. There was, he said, one house between his ranch and Dickinson, and that was at Black Butte.

When the Milwaukee railroad was pushed through, Mr. Dye sold a subsidiary of the road several townships belonging to him and friends, and the subsidiary resold to settlers. Mr. Dye also had a ranch near Miles City.

Mr. Dye continued ranching for a few years, until other business interests made it impossible to continue trips here.

"Now, west of the river, I find settlement almost as thick as they were in Illinois when I was a boy," said Mr. Dye. "People without any means can come into southwestern North Dakota and with less effort make more money and acquire as attractive farms as can be had in Indiana and Illinois. Their children look healthier, and they are just as well educated and as good citizens as in the Middle West. With diversified farming, owning of chickens, sheep, cattle, dairy cows and gardens, they can make a good living, and wheat is profitable at times, although one should not count on it.

Can Make Money

"A man can go into southwestern North Dakota with no money except enough to carry him through one winter, and with one team of horses build himself a home and make money. The climate is wonderful. The Secret indictments against 104 persons, alleged to have participated in or been responsible for the disorders which occurred in Niles, Ohio, Nov. 1, and various recommendations, including ousting of Mayor Harvey C. Kistler and Police Chief L. J. Rounds of Niles, are contained in the report of a special Tribunal county grand jury, which investigated charges between Ku Klux Klansmen and anti-Klansmen.

The report, submitted to common pleas Judge Charles M. Wilkins, after the jury had been in session ten days, and examined 257 witnesses, commended Governor A. V. Donahoe "for the prompt and thorough manner in which he restored order."

Removal of Mayor Kistler and Chief Rounds was recommended "for the best interests of Niles and the state." Referring to Sheriff John Thomas, the report says "we are fully convinced that he did all in his power to preserve order."

Enactment of a law establishing a state constabulary and repeal of chapters under which organizations are attempting to function as state police were recommended.

YOUNGEST EDITOR GOES TO COLLEGE

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 8.—The youngest editor of the United States has decided that he wants more education before continuing a newspaper career. Arnold Tuskind, former editor of the Davenport, N. D., Dispatch, has put away his editor's pen, his eye-shade, paper cutter and printer's rule in order to attend the North Dakota Agricultural college at which institution he is enrolled for a four-year cultural course.

When Mr. Tuskind became editor of the Dispatch in 1921 he was but 16 years old, being the youngest editor in the country. He was not only editor but publisher as well, and he adds—reporter, typesetter, proof reader, pressman, copyreader and paper cutter. He was even his own office boy.

During the time that he put out the Dispatch he attended high school in Davenport, leaving there in 1923 to finish his high school course at Fargo. He entered the agricultural college this fall. The Davenport Dispatch at the time that Mr. Tuskind was editor consisted of eight pages and was a six-column paper having a circulation of 800.

PETITIONS TO PAY DEFICIT CIRCULATED

Beach, N. D., Dec. 8.—Petitions asking the North Dakota legislature to either amend the present state hall insurance law so that the 20 percent of 1923 hall losses still unpaid may be paid out of the reserve fund, or to make an appropriation to pay the losses, have been prepared by H. H. Harpster, farmer of near here.

The petitions will not be circulated in Golden Valley county alone, but will be sent to other counties in the state in an endeavor to obtain concerted action in bringing about the payment of the 20 percent remaining unpaid on hall losses.

S. A. Olsness, state commissioner of insurance, in his report to the governor, states that the 1923 hall losses had to be prorated (on a basis of payment of 80 percent of the claims) because the 1923 losses exceeded the amount that could be raised under the 50 cents an acre limit in the present law.

Martin S. Hagen, manager of the state hall insurance department, in his recommendations to the legislature says:

"The 20 percent of the 1923 hall losses now unpaid may easily be appropriated out of the surplus within the hall insurance fund without any serious consequence to the department and we therefore recommend same to be done."

A personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Dye added an enthusiastic urge that the North Dakota Badlands be converted into a government game preserve or national park as a Roosevelt memorial.

The Ranching Days

Mr. Dye first came to North Dakota in 1897, as an attorney representing an Indiana man who had interests. Impressed by the freedom of growth of Buffalo grass, Mr. Dye took a trip through southwest North Dakota and was amazed at the opportunities there, he said. He tried to buy land and found it was not surveyed. He leased other land and began ranching, spending the summers here, and usually January and March. He recalled among the ranchers of the day, most of them now gone, Guy Clark of the HIT ranch, Wallace Heidecker, now in Montana; Fry, James Phelan, now of Bowman, and others. He recalled the purchase of Fred Pabst, Milwaukee brewer, of the horse ranch of a Heidecker. Pabst bought 3,500 horses, but when they were rounded up for the first time in years found he had 6,500 horses. Land on the lower Cannon Ball, where Mr. Dye ranched, sold for $125 an acre. There was, he said, one house between his ranch and Dickinson, and that was at Black Butte.

When the Milwaukee railroad was moved through, Mr. Dye sold a subsidiary of the road several townships belonging to him and friends, and the subsidiary resold to settlers. Mr. Dye also had a ranch near Miles City.

Mr. Dye continued ranching for a few years, until other business interests made it impossible to continue the trips here.

"Now, west of the river, I find settlement almost as thick as they were in Illinois when I was a boy," said Mr. Dye. "People without any means can come into southwestern North Dakota and with less effort make more money and acquire as attractive farms as can be had in Indiana and Illinois. Their children look healthier, and they are just as well educated and as good citizens as in the Middle West. With diversified farming, owning of chickens, sheep, cattle, dairy cows and gardens, they can make a good living, and wheat is profitable at times, although one should not count on it.

Can Make Money

"A man can go into southwestern North Dakota with no money except enough to carry him through one winter, and with one team of horses, build himself a home and make money. The climate is wonderful. The air is pure. There is less lung trouble than in the Middle West. There is an absence of slushy winter weather which tears down health. A man can work out of doors more days in the year than in Indiana and Illinois; his sheep or milk cows will run out almost all winter and they won't in the Middle West. His fuel is cheaper.

"The days of the big ranches have passed, except in the Badlands, and there is room there for a few. People ranching there should make a lot of money if they feed sheep and cattle and provide feed from small irrigated spot. Wheat has broken many ranches in that country."

Bismarck, Mr. Dye called "the best town of its size any place in the United States—the cleanest, most livable, likeable place."

Roosevelt on N. D.

Theodore Roosevelt held North Dakota close to his heart, Mr. Dye said. A friend of Roosevelt, Mr. Dye visited him at Oyster Bay, New York, many times, and prizes several letters from Roosevelt.

"Roosevelt often would talk about his early experience in North Dakota," said Mr. Dye. "He attributed his success to the education he got in the early days around Medora as much as to his college education, and book reading. He was educated as well as learned educated in the rough and ready life of the Badlands to take care of himself under any condition. He became an all around man instead of a specialist."

"It would be a wonderful thing if the Badlands could be preserved as a posterity. They are now much as they were when Roosevelt roamed them. The Badlands would make a fine game preserve, and such regions must be established if the wild life of the nation is to be preserved. There is no more spot in America more weird or attractive than the Badlands of North Dakota, and because of the great contribution to Roosevelt's life no spot should be more sacred."

Another Is Near Death From Poison

Washburn, N. D., Dec. 8.—Walter Jerison, of Farkirk, is the third man in the county in almost as many weeks to experience the effects of monoxide gas. Although his case or the case of the others were not fatal, a few more minutes in the presence of the fumes would no doubt have made them.

Mr. Jerison was working on his car in his garage at Farkirk Tuesday evening. There his young son found him unconscious and the engine of the car running. Quick work on the part of his family brought him around, although it is thought that a short time longer in the garage the gas would have ended his life. A few hours afterward he seemed to be none the worse for the accident.

The other two men who had the same experience, Alfred Ekstrom of this city, who was gassed in the cab of a truck on St. street, and Ed. Kitt, of Dodson, who was found by his daughter, unconscious in his garage, have, as far as is known, fully recovered from their close escape from death. The gas apparently leaves no after-effect. Its deadly work is done, only when one is confined with it.

Removal of Mayor Kistler and Chief Rounds was recommended "for the best interests of Niles and the state." Referring to Sheriff John Thomas, the report says "we are fully convinced that he did all in his power to preserve order."

Enactment of a law establishing a state constabulary and repeal of chapters under which organizations are attempting to function as state police were recommended.

YOUNGEST EDITOR GOES TO COLLEGE

Fargo, N. D., Dec. 8.—The youngest editor of the United States has decided that he wants more education before continuing a newspaper career. Arnold J. Tuskind, former editor of the Davenport, N. D., Dispatch, has put away his editor's pencil, his eye shade, paper cutter and printer's rule in order to attend the North Dakota Agricultural college at which institution he is enrolled for a four-year cultural course.

When Mr. Tuskind became editor of the Dispatch in 1921 he was but 16 years old, being the youngest editor in the country. He was not only editor but publisher as well, and he adds—reporter, typesetter, proof reader, pressman, copyreader and paper cutter. He was even his own office boy.

During the time that he put out the Dispatch he attended high school in Davenport, leaving there in 1923 to finish his high school course at Fargo. He entered the agricultural college this fall. The Davenport Dispatch at the time that Mr. Tuskind was editor consisted of eight pages and was a six-column paper having a circulation of 800.

Merry, appointed receiver January 23, 1924, to file a report on the assets of the company the day he became receiver, all acts of the receiver and disbursements, and other information. WILL CONDUCT OLSON CASE

John Thorpe, first assistant Attorney-General, will conduct the preliminary examination in the case of Jourgen Olson, Minot banker, charged with rendering a false report to the state bank examiner and omitting the making of material entries in the records of corporations, if a preliminary examination is required by the defendant. The case against Mr. Olson, growing out of the defunct American State Bank of Burlington was originated by the Attorney-General's office.

Situation in Reichstag Precludes Three-Party Coalition

The election in Germany, which was held on Tuesday, December 6, has not clarified the situation in the Reichstag. The results show that the Social Democrats have lost their position as the largest party, but they still remain a powerful force. The Nationalists have gained seats, but they are still a minority. The situation is still uncertain, and it is likely that a coalition government will be formed.

Today Truly's waistline is back to 22 inches. She tips the scales at 122. And she does not look a day more than 30, though she is 56. But she must throw away all her clothes. $8000 worth, she says. Her very best party dress now fits her nearly twice.

"I don't care, though," she laughs. "I'm going back to lick the world. I want life and love and beauty and peace once more. It is like being in heaven."

"I hear you, old footlights. And I'm coming."

Off stage, Truly's real name is Lucile Reulha de Bucharde.

CAPITAL PHONE SERVICE HIT

Hole Shot Through Cable Containing Hundred Wires

Telephone service at the state capitol was somewhat interrupted today as a result of someone having shot a hole through the cable containing one hundred wires over which service is furnished. It is presumed that some one was following a more or less favorite pastime of shooting at the glass insulators on the pole and the bullet struck the lead cable instead of the insulator. The result was that about twenty telephones were out of service a part of the day which caused great inconvenience to state officials as well as a considerable amount of expense to the telephone company. The telephone company reports, however, that damage of this nature is of rather rare occurrence inasmuch as cable is seldom used outside of the more thickly populated parts of a city but in this case it is necessary to furnish the necessary lines to the capitol. The shooting off of the glass insulators in the rural districts is not as common as it was a few years ago and this is greatly appreciated by all telephone companies inasmuch as it often resulted in interrupting the toll and rural service although no doubt the offender thought his act was quite harmless.

New Method Heals Pyorrhea

Ten Years Bad Case Completely Healed in a Short Time Writes Florida Woman.

Faced with the loss of her teeth, after 10 years' suffering, Mrs. M. J. Travis, an esteemed resident of Jacksonville, declares she finally saved her teeth by a single home treatment: "worth its weight in gold," using her own words: "After having pyorrhea for 10 years my mouth is now healed. Before I found out differently, I was told there was no relief and had yielded to the loss of my fine solid teeth. Then I discovered Moore's pyorrhea treatment. Three days after starting its use, the soreness left my gums; my teeth began to tighten. Now my teeth are clean, my breath sweet, and my mouth completely healed."

The experience of Mrs. Travis is duplicated in hundreds of other cases. If you have pyorrhea—or threatened with pyorrhea—your teeth are in danger. Quick and effective treatment is necessary. You can test, without money risk, the treatment used by Mrs. Travis. Simply write the Moreham Co., 1151 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo. Under their guarantee of refund send two dollars. PEOPLE

Generally believe with us when we say—"The Sale Store policy is wrong." We say "The People generally believe with us," basing our contention on the fact that "actions speak louder than words."

Saturday was the largest men's furnishings sales we have ever made. Many people have told us in plain English that our values are by far the greatest in Bismarck.

HERE IS THE REASON

We have patterned our sales policy of never holding sales from some of the largest men's wear stores in this good old U. S. A. By selecting our stock with great care, buying small lots, eliminating "carry-overs," and selling at the average price FIRST, enables us to give greater values, thereby moving all our stock, without having to hold sales, the customer getting the benefit of the right price at the start of the buying season.

CONVINCE YOURSELF THAT OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT BY SHOPPING AT OTHER STORES FIRST.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

FEELS ITS ISOLATION

Wisconsin, the only state to come under the third party banner, feels its loneliness politically. In a recent editorial, the Janesville Daily Gazette of Janesville, Wis., asks the following pertinent question: "Why Not Recognize Something Else in Wisconsin Besides Politics?"

This newspaper wants the people to forget Wisconsin's politics and think of the fertility of its soil, the beauty of its scenery and the yield of its milk cows and the output of the cheese factories.

Wisconsin has felt the curse of too much politics in business. Some very important industries have left Wisconsin and moved across into Michigan and Illinois where wiser legislation attracts industry rather than attacks it. In North Dakota's case, however, not being a great manufacturing state, the experiment in socialism, boards, commissions and what not, the burden has come right back upon the farmer in whose behalf these experiments are supposed to be made. As the farmer votes 85% of the vote and pays approximately that proportion of the taxes, the politicians are urging that he can continue the mill and elevator and other ventures as long as he cares to pay the piper.

But some people in Wisconsin regard the regime of La Follette as a "boil," irritating but not necessarily a fatal malady. The Gazette of Janesville is quite entertaining in the opening paragraphs of its editorial in which outsiders are asked to forget the state's politics and ponder on its statistics. Says the Gazette:

"Daniel Webster in his reply to Hayne of South Carolina when the integrity of Massachusetts had been attacked, replied, 'Massachusetts! There she stands; she needs no encomium!' But Webster did not leave his adopted state 'there.' He went on to tell about it and that's what should be done for Wisconsin.

"It's an old story, that one about the travelers in the Pullman, each proudly naming the state of his birth, when the little, jaundiced man, called upon to testify concerning himself, replied with a challenge, 'I was born in Arkansas; now damn it, laugh.'"

"Traveling outside of Wisconsin one gets wearied with the questioning look that comes into the faces of the others when a declaration that you are from Wisconsin is made. Invariably the outsider, especially if he is from the east, smiles pitifully. He judges Wisconsin only by the election returns.

"No true Wisconsin man will ever make an apology for his state. He may make personal explanation but never, never, apologize for living in Wisconsin. Rather, he will carry a few facts concerning his state with which to confound its enemies and beat them at any game they want to play in total points when it comes to figures. If a man has a boil on his leg it may cause him pain, keep him standing up, but it is not necessarily fatal. We may have a boil in Wisconsin, but it is political and will not be fatal. We have the experience of Job, who was an expert in boils, and survived, to prove it.

"We have no more fool laws in Wisconsin than other states. Maybe we have not inherited as many from a dead and worshipped past. This is a state of superlatives. We have scenery which no other state can touch in serene beauty and Nature has been most generous everywhere. Most of the scenery can be cultivated. You can eat your scenery cake in Wisconsin and keep it too. But more than all else we are looking ahead. There will be no repetition of Lot's wife in Wisconsin."

COMMON SENSE IN TRAFFIC

Conditions and all other things considered, it ever has been true that New York City has handled its traffic better than any other city in the country. That is because the immensity of the proposition has forced the authorities to seek ideas rather than employ whims. Now, having had a good spell of thinking, the big city is going to do better than ever.

A new scheme will be tried out on Fifth avenue, as well as other representative thoroughfares. All the present signal towers will be taken down and in their stead will be erected steel poles, 24 feet high and with 12-foot arms, carrying the housing for lights and lenses and other directing and controlling appliances.

These warning appliances will be controlled, and operated, not at each block corner, but the whole length of a street simultaneously. That is, the whole traffic of a given street will move at one and the same time, or it will stop on signal. In addition, the removal of the towers will allow more room for traffic to move.

The idea is the correct one and it is applicable to every city in the country. The block-by-block control of traffic never has solved any problem of congestion, but, on the contrary, has increased it.

This is true because it is and has been invariably the case that, when one officer was stopping traffic, another one a block away was ordering it to move. The result has been jams at one corner while another one but a few hundred feet away was clear.

It stands to reason that traffic may never be properly controlled and made safe until it is compelled both to move and stop in good order—until it is synchronized. The railways and tractions learned this truth a long time ago and New York now gives evidence that municipalities are beginning to find their common sense and to use it.

If you don't know where they get bootleg—they get it in the neck.

A woman can't make a fool out of a man without his help.

PRINCE AND COMEDIAN

(Springfield News)

A story is related in the newspapers about a meeting between Will Rogers, the comedian of the Follies, and the prince of Wales. They both played polo, though on opposite sides, and later met at a dinner, where Rogers was urged to say a few funny things, meaning to poke fun at the royal visitor. The prince, as a matter of fact, seems to have come out of this banquet scene without any scars and laughed heartily at the jokes of our premier comedian in America.

All of which goes to show that even the heir to the throne of England is most human and capable not only of understanding, but appreciating an American joke as well. Over there some of the more scholarly of the punsters say that the Americans are not funny; that our brand of humor is stale and incomplete and that it only forces a laugh for the sake of being cordial.

The plain fact is there is a very interesting side to English humor and one would be seriously wanting to attempt to prove that all English comedy is impossible. When the prince and the comedian met about the festive board it was a rare occasion and not the least interested was the fair-haired young man who was a stranger in a strange land and apt to be bored by being made the object of a stranger's jokishness.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

A SHOO-FLY RIDDLE

See if you can guess this riddle, my dears as quickly as Nancy did.
"I'm the friendliest person you ever did see,
If there's half a chance for a meal,
But when I'm not invited
You cannot blame me,
If my appetite tempts me to eat."

"I go round the table from this plate to that,
And daintily sit down and sip,
I sample the gravy,
I nibble the fat,
And into the tea-cups I dip."

"I dearly love butter, and jelly's a treat,
But I'm not so greedy for bread,
I am always around,
When there's anything sweet,
Such as cookies or cake-crumbs or spread."

"I am not at all sensitive, never feel hurt,
When you cry at my manners, 'Oh, fie!'
It matters far more,
What you have for dessert,
If you've berries, or pudding, or pie."

"I buzz my delight as I feast on your food,
And I sample your coffee and water,
It doesn't disturb me,
At all to be shoed,
The one thing that I fear is a swatter."

The Twins had gone off by themselves to hunt a shady place. But they could hear the Riddle Lady's voice through the trees quite plainly.
"It's a fly!" called Nancy popping out.

"Oh, I guessed it, too!" said Little Boy Blue. "But all the flies aren't in the dining-room and kitchen. There is a whole stack in the hay-field."

Everybody laughed.
"Why, what's the matter?" asked Little Boy Blue in surprise.
"Where would a stack be if not in the hay-field," said Mrs. John kindly. "Either a whole stack or half a stack."

"Oh, I don't mean the kind of a stack I went to sleep under," said Little Boy Blue. "I mean a stack of flies. I suppose I should say a great many flies."

"Well," said the Riddle Lady. "The prize is a whistle and I'll have to give it to Nancy. She said it first." "Give it to Little Boy Blue, please," said kind Nancy. "He needs a whistle more than I do. A whistle is much better than a horn."

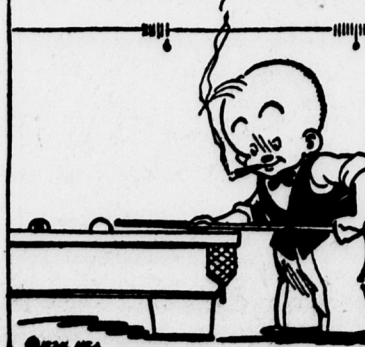

"Here is another short riddle," said the Riddle Lady. "What has one wheel but makes three tracks?"
Well, sir, the Mother Goose people guessed everything from sleds to kiddy-kars. But it was none of those.

Everybody gave up and the Riddle Lady had to tell.
"A wheel-barrow," said she.
Now, why, my dears, does it make three tracks, do you think?

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

My Dear Husband: I know now that the old man who said almost at the end of a long life, 'I've had a great deal of trouble in my life, most of which never happened,' was right. The things which perhaps fret us most, never happen.

Here I've been worrying about your being angry at me, Jack, ever since I went into business with Ruth and you surprise me by saying that you are very proud of me and pay me all sorts of compliments about being a good business woman.

It is these little variations in the moods and character of those we love that make us enjoy them more and more. I am never quite sure Jack what you will do next or how you will do it.

I am afraid, however, that you are too sure of me, that I am too dependable perhaps, to really be interesting. You seem to know that given a certain set of circumstances I will always react in a certain manner. Some day I will surprise you, dear, by doing something totally unexpected.

Dearest, you know that although I may make great mistakes in judgment, I never do things that I think would hurt or anger you. Naturally of course I claim the right to help a friend whenever I feel it necessary without consulting you just as you have helped your friends many times probably without consulting me.

Sometimes I think it is not the big troubles that "mess up" (as you would call it) the success of married life, but it is the little annoyances that come up every day that keep one's nerves frazzled and ones viewpoint warped, that makes two people hate each other who once loved. I am very glad that you have found out one thing by going back home without me and that is how impossible it would be to have you mother live with us. She would not be happy for a moment nor would she let us be happy. I have always thought that the Puritans must have been very uncomfortable to live with. Their descendants are always so sure of their own righteousness and their own judgments. They can become your judge without questioning their own fitness in any way.

You say, dear, we will try very hard when we get old to remember how prone old people are to think they know so much more than the younger ones.

I don't blame my mother for doing what she wants to, when she wants to, and how she wants to, but I do blame her for insisting that we should do exactly as she thinks best for us as well as for herself.

I think my own dear mother understands the viewpoint of the younger generation, for although I have said nothing to her about the letter that your mother wrote me, yet when we were talking yesterday and I suggested that she live with us in the old house after we purchased it, he told me she was not going to live with either of her daughters.

"I know we will get along and love each other much better if we do not live together," she said a little apologetically. I think mother has decided to travel and then come back to live in one of the hotels near us.

Will you please tell Syd that I am going to write him a long letter and I do hope he will come over here with you, but until I see him, he must always remember that I consider him my best friend.

LESLIE.

SHEIK CLOTHES LOSE OUT

By Albert Apple

A craze for thick woolen shirts is spreading like wild-fire among college and high school lads, the country over. Colors are gaudy—such as red and black checkerboards. The idea seems to be to imitate the Mackinaw coats of lumberjacks.

It's the healthiest sign we've observed in the nation's youth for many a moon.

It suggests there's a reaction against what might be summed up as sheikism and lounge-lizardism.

With great glee, old-timers will observe the waning of an effeminate tendency in a considerable number of American youths. The lads want to look like "he-men" again.

It's too early to use the bromide that the country is saved. But sanity is returning when youth strongly demonstrates the traits of virile, sensible manhood.

Styles are pretty good weathervanes of national tendencies. Conditions were very healthy years ago when boys in their late teens wore flannel shirts, rough peg-top trousers, maybe chewed tobacco on the sly, read Nick Carter and from the east went west in summertime to work in wheat fields for winter spending money.

They belonged to a virile generation.

Their ragtime was healthier than the modern decadent form of jazz blues. There wasn't as much synthetic gin in those days.

The typical Nick Carter reader was a much more promising lad than the sissy who doted on namby-pamby Rollo books.

Signs of decadence show up periodically in all civilizations. But the pendulum in America always swings back to normal. It may very well be that youth's sudden craze for rough lumberjack shirts means the beginning of the end of jazz life in entirety.

The "Covered Wagon" type of fiction and movie is eclipsing the sheik type. This also reflects a change in the audiences, especially youth.

New York, Dec. 8.—See-sawing up and down Broadway saw Tom Moighan, on his way to Birmingham, Ala., there to do scenes for a movie of a story written by Jack Bethea, a Birmingham newspaperman.

Saw Al Woods, the bedroom farce impresario. Forget now whether he was on the way to England, or just returning—he does both so often.—Saw Eddie Sutherland, a young nabob who was my idea of the world's worst screen actor, now a successful director.... Saw Helen MacKellar, the most wronged woman of the stage except Florence Reed, and methinks she looks lovelier on the street than behind the footlights.... Saw Eugene Frey, a baritone, making his first New York appearance after a tour of the country. He looks more the part of a screen villain than that of a singer.... Saw George Rasmussen, a sweet as sugar as Brodway, looking as lugubrious as a pall-bearer.... Seeing more short skirts than for several months and girls with ugliest legs seem to wear them.... Seeing far less fur-bearing animals than roamed Broadway last year....

Barney Gallant is going to open a new supper club in Greenwich Village. When his former place was closed a while back, all the other supper clubs in MacDougal Alley lost patronage. Business in the village thrives through contiguity, it seems.

A book shop in our Bohemia. A boy of 14 enters, wearing heavy-rimmed glasses and an Eton skull-cap. He glances over the titles and the young clerk makes several suggestions. "Oh, no!" he answers. "I want something for mother. She's quite sophisticated, you know. She has just finished 'The Tattooed Countess.' I read it myself a week ago and thought it wasn't half bad. How's this new thing by Ben Hecht? I imagine mother would like it."

He bought four books. After he had gone the clerk told me that he was the son of a learned man who wrote a boy's version of the Bible so his boys could understand it.

Life isn't so drab in the Bronx county jail. In front there is a park, in the rear a theater where music is played, on one side busy Tremont avenue and on the other a row of apartment houses with an amply supply of radio loud speakers. And for one hour each Wednesday and Friday an organ grinder entertains without hope of pay. Screens over the jail windows prevent inmates from tossing him coins.

A JOB FOR THE COOK

To teach children, and grown men as well, to like foods that are good for them is a job that centers upon the cook herself.

Thus Mrs. Jones of Anytown sought to vary the type of vegetables served at each meal, and also to alter the style of cooking them. Such frequent changes in variety and appearance and taste are to be recommended.

A list of vegetables, arranged for various days, can be jotted down by the housewife who, on some days, can cream them and on another prepare them without sauce and upon another combine two or three of them into one dish and secure a considerable variety, from day to day.

at writing. But do not try to ridicule or be sarcastic. This trait, often noted in persons born this day, can easily be corrected.
Your sense of humor can be made profitable, and you can make many friends by being more jovial.

Williston, N. D., Dec. 8.—"Cap" Bailey, age 80, well known Williston character, operator of the famous Williston ferry, died here last week.

Bailey was born in Ontario, went to what is now South Dakota sixty-two years ago where he operated a ferry at the Sheyenne reservation. He went from there to Moberg and 23 years ago brought his ferry to Williston and operated it until failing health prevented.

A portrait of "Cap" Bailey, taken in 1912, won the grand medal at the northwest photographers' convention at Minneapolis.

CONSTIPATION OVERCOME

The use of FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS will bring speedy relief from constipation if taken promptly. They are purely vegetable and act on the liver. Mr. John D. McComb, Lucas Co. Home, Toledo, Ohio, writes: "Have used Foley CATHARTIC TABLETS in several cases of constipation to which I am subject and found them beneficial." FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS are easy to take, leave no unpleasant after effects. Try them.

CHILL is spreading; trees are shedding. Fall is with us now. Mister World is rather curled in withers, somehow.
Meadow scene that once was green has turned to dusky brown. Stalks of corn, in summer born, have died and fallen down.
Garden borders of brilliant flowers are standing cold and bare. Warmth that was, is gone because there's chilliness in the air.
Every day, in every way, the scenes are changing fast. Lengthy day has passed away and nights much longer last.
Old Jack Frost cannot be bossed; he's dragged us in his den. Time he sped and summer's dead. The fall is here again.

Engagement Is Announced

On Saturday evening Mrs. Nathan announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Clara Blumer, to Fred Mikkelsen of Minneapolis. The party took place at the Nathan home at 614-8th Street. Guests included fourteen intimate friends of the bride-to-be. The announcement was made in a unique and clever way, and came as a complete surprise at an unexpected moment during the evening's diversion, which had been planned in every detail to fit the occasion. Red hearts were a prominent feature of the party, even being used in the two course luncheon which was served. The hostess was assisted by Mabel Han and Viola Bailey. The wedding, which is to be an event of December thirty-first, is the culmination of a college romance, both Miss Blumer and Mr. Mikkelsen being graduates of Asbury College, Kentucky. Mr. Mikkelsen has recently taken his post graduate work at Columbia University, and is now one of the professors of History at his Alma Mater.

Miss Blumer is executive clerk to Governor Nestor.

The Sins of Her Parents

MARIE'S life was a cruelly restricted one. She was denied all companionship with young men, deprived of the simple pleasures every girl loves.

Her father brought home a young Frenchman whom she was to marry. Marie detested him. He was like a sleek, well-fed pig.

Then she met Sandy McCandless—big, gentle, lovingly tender. Sandy asked her to marry him. She took him home, that her parents might approve their love.

Little she dreamed of the startling train of events which were to have their beginning when she introduced Sandy McCandless to her parents. She could not foresee the intrigue, jealousy, hate that was to reach clear across the Atlantic, blast four lives, and burn deep scars upon their souls.

No matter how much or how little you know of life—you cannot afford to miss reading "Derelict Lives," in the January issue of True Story Magazine. And it is only one of the many absorbing features in January True Story. Secure your copy at any newsstand today.

Other Startling Life Stories in January True Story are:

- "The Acid Test"—She lived in New York's gay Greenwich Village, when she married and moved to a suburban town. But soon memories of gay dinners, jolly dances, and the hectic night-life of Broadway began to haunt her. With her husband's consent, she went back for a "test"—little dreamt of her that a whirlwind of mad events her longing for the gay life was to lead her. A thrilling, plainly-told story with an unexpected outcome.
- "The Men Women Want"—Of humble birth, youth longed for mental culture, pictures, music, books. So when she became private secretary to Loring MacVagh, his broad education and culture made a profound impression on her mind. She had not learned that under the guise of refinement there may lurk the vilest beast.
- "The Misfit Wife"—When Mary married, she did not dream that temptation or the slightest thought of disloyalty to her husband would threaten her sacred vows. Yet, when an old sweetheart offered her his love and wealth, she was tried by fires from which only a woman of innate purity and strength could emerge unscathed. If you think that wealth and leisure, and selfish joys are the only worth-while things in life, read this girl's confession—every word of which is true.
- "A Soul for Sale"—"The Honorable Way"—"Wayward Youth"—"An Unexpected Return"—"Made in Heaven"—"Through Eyes of Youth"
- "The Price They Pay"—A young girl suddenly disappeared. Later she was taken from the river—dead. A note she left behind told her pitiful story. She wrote: "Oh, mother, if I had only known, if you—or some one—had only told me. Please
- "Woman Against Woman"—When Sally listened to the solemn promises of the rich young Henry Harris—and trouble came—his proud mother sought to spirit him off to Europe. But a respectable old doctor turned blackmailer to save the girl whose innocence and ignorance of life came so near resulting in tragedy.
- "Her One Temptation"—Minnette thought a girl was a fool to marry only for love—unless money, pretty clothes, good times went along with it. She did not know the faithful price girls pay who seek happiness in purely material things—or that when she encouraged the attention of a rich but unscrupulous man, that she was dooming herself to the lowest depths of degradation and bitter suffering.

"One night I met him on St. James Street. At first, I did not know who he was. Then he turned and I saw the look of agony, despair, the look of a man who has been through hell and back."

From "Derelict Lives" in January True Story

don't think I'm bad. But I loved him so, I gave him all, and now he's gone. I still love him—but I cannot go on living. Everything is ended. He no longer cares."

Whereupon the arch spirit of Evil sneaked and leered and sneered up another triumph. Youth, love, life, has again paid the ghastly price of innocence and ignorance.

It was to teach, to warn the innocent that Bernard Macfadden founded True Story Magazine a new type of story. In its pages thousands of lives have been told in a terrible price they have paid in bitter sorrow, shame and suffering.

Thousands have been helped, inspired and saved from wrong through the powerful lessons taught in the pages of True Story Magazine.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

FEELS ITS ISOLATION
Wisconsin, the only state to come under the third party banner, feels its loneliness politically. In a recent editorial, the Janesville Daily Gazette of Janesville, Wis., asks the following pertinent question: "Why Not Recognize Something Else in Wisconsin Besides Politics?"

This newspaper wants the people to forget Wisconsin's politics and think of the fertility of its soil, the beauty of its scenery and the yield of its milch cows and the output of the cheese factories.

Wisconsin has felt the curse of too much politics in business. Some very important industries have left Wisconsin and moved across into Michigan and Illinois where wiser legislation attracts industry rather than attacks it. In North Dakota's case, however, not being a great manufacturing state, the experiment in socialism, boards, commissions and what not, the burden has come right back upon the farmer in whose behalf these experiments are supposed to be made. As the farmer votes 85% of the vote and pays approximately that proportion of the taxes, the politicians are urging that he can continue the mill and elevator and other ventures as long as he cares to pay the piper.

But some people in Wisconsin regard the regime of La Follette as a "boil," irritating but not necessarily a fatal malady. The Gazette of Janesville is quite entertaining in the opening paragraphs of its editorial in which outsiders are asked to forget the state's politics and ponder on its statistics. Says the Gazette:

"Daniel Webster in his reply to Hayne of South Carolina when the integrity of Massachusetts had been attacked, replied, 'Massachusetts! There she stands; she needs no encomium!' But Webster did not leave his adopted state 'there.' He went on to tell about it and that's what should be done for Wisconsin.

"It's an old story, that one about the travelers in the Pullman, each proudly naming the state of his birth, when the little, jaundiced man, called upon to testify concerning himself, replied with a challenge, 'I was born in Arkansas—now damn it, laugh.'"

"Traveling outside of Wisconsin one gets wearied with the questioning look that comes into the faces of the others when a declaration that you are from Wisconsin is made. Invariably the outsider, especially if he is from the east, smiles pitifully. He judges Wisconsin only by the election returns.

"No true Wisconsin man will ever make an apology for his state. He may make personal explanation but never, never, apologize for living in Wisconsin. Rather, he will carry a few facts concerning his state with which to confound its enemies and beat them at any game they want to play in total points when it comes to figures. If a man has a boil on his leg it may cause him pain, keep him standing up, but it is not necessarily fatal. We may have a boil in Wisconsin, but it is political and will not be fatal. We have the experience of Job, who was an expert in boils, and survived, to prove it.

"We have no more fool laws in Wisconsin than other states. Maybe we have not inherited as many from a dead and worshipped past. This is a state of superlatives. We have scenery which no other state can touch in serene beauty and Nature has been most generous everywhere. Most of the scenery can be cultivated. You can eat your scenery cake in Wisconsin and keep it too. But more than all else we are looking ahead. There will be no repetition of Lot's wife in Wisconsin."

COMMON SENSE IN TRAFFIC
Conditions and all other things considered, it ever has been true that New York City has handled its traffic better than any other city in the country. That is because the immensity of the proposition has forced the authorities to seek ideas rather than employ whims. Now, having had a good spell of thinking, the big city is going to do better than ever. A new scheme will be tried out on Fifth avenue, as well as other representative thoroughfares. All the present signal towers will be taken down and in their stead will be erected steel poles, 22 feet high and with 12-foot arms, carrying the housing for lights and lenses and other directing and controlling appliances.

These warning appliances will be controlled, and operated, not at each block corner, but the whole length of a street simultaneously. That is, the whole traffic of a given street will move at one and the same time, or it will stop on signal. In addition, the removal of the towers will allow more room for traffic to move.

The idea is the correct one and it is applicable to every city in the country. The block-by-block control of traffic never has solved any problem of congestion, but, on the contrary, has increased it.

This is true because it is and has been invariably the case that, when one officer was stopping traffic, another one a block away was ordering it to move. The result has been jams at one corner while another one but a few hundred feet away was clear.

It stands to reason that traffic may never be properly controlled and made safe until it is compelled both to move and stop in good order—until it is synchronized. The railways and tractions learned this truth a long time ago and New York now gives evidence that municipalities are beginning to find their common sense and to use it.

If you don't know where they get bores—only get them in the neck.

A woman can't make a fool out of a man without his help.

PRINCE AND COMEDIAN

(Springfield News)

A story is related in the newspapers about a meeting between Will Rogers, the comedian of the Folies, and the prince of Wales. They both played polo, though on opposite sides, and later met at a dinner, where Rogers was urged to say a few funny things, meaning to poke fun at the royal visitor. The prince, as a matter of fact, seems to have come out of this banquet scene without any scars and laughed heartily at the jokes of our premier comedian in America.

All of which goes to show that even the heir to the throne of England is most human and capable not only of understanding, but appreciating an American joke as well. Over there some of the more scholarly of the masters say that the Americans are not funny; that our brand of humor is stale and incomplete and that it only forces a laugh for the sake of being cordial.

The plain fact is there is a very interesting side to English humor and one would be seriously wanting in proper appraisal of the subject to attempt to prove that all English comedy is impossible. When the prince and the comedian met about the polo, heard it was a rare occasion and not the least interested was the fair-haired young man who was a stranger in a strange land and apt to be bored by being made the object of a stranger's jokishness.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

A SHOO-FLY RIDDLE

See if you can guess this riddle, my dears, as quickly as Nancy did. 'I'm the friendliest person you ever did see.

If there's half a chance for a meal, But when I'm not invited You cannot blame me. If my appetite tempts me to eat.

"I go round the table from this plate to that, And daintily sit down and sip. I sample the gravy, I nibble the fat, And into the tea-cups I dip.

"I dearly love butter, and jelly's a treat, But I'm not so greedy for bread, I am always around. When there's anything sweet, Such as cookies or cake-crumbs or spread.

"I am not at all sensitive, never feel hurt, When you cry at my manners, 'Oh, fie!'

It matters far more, What you have for dessert, If you've berries, or pudding, or pie.

"I buzz my delight as I feast on your food, And I sample your coffee and water, It doesn't disturb me At all to be shooved, The one thing that I fear is a swatter."

The Twins had gone off by themselves to hunt a shady place. But they could hear the Riddle Lady's voice through the trees quite plainly. "It's a fly!" called Nancy popping out.

"Oh, I guessed it, too!" said Little Boy Blue. "But all the flies aren't in the dining-room and kitchen. There is a whole stack in the hay-field."

Everybody laughed. "Why, what's the matter?" asked Little Boy Blue in surprise. "Where would a stack be, if not in the hay-field?" said Mrs. John kindly. "Either a whole stack or half a stack."

"Oh, I don't mean the kind of a stack I went to sleep under," said Little Boy Blue. "I mean a stack of flies. I suppose I should say a great many flies."

"Well," said the Riddle Lady. "The prize is a whistle and I'll have to give it to Nancy. She said it first."

"Give it to Little Boy Blue, please," said kind Nancy. "He needs a whistle more than I do. A whistle is much better than a horn."

"Here is another short riddle," said the Riddle Lady. "What has one wheel but makes three tracks?"

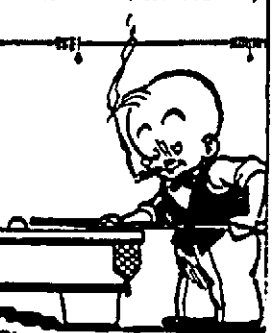

Well, sir, the Mother Goose people guessed everything from sleds to kiddy-kars. But it was none of those.

Everybody gave up and the Riddle Lady had to tell. "A wheelbarrow," said she. Now, why, my dears, does it make three tracks, do you think?

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

My Dear Husband: I know now that the old man who said almost at the end of a long life, 'I've had a great deal of trouble in my life, most of which never happened,' was right. The things which perhaps fret us most, never happen.

Here I've been worrying about your being angry at me, Jack, ever since I went into business with Ruth and you surprise me by saying that you are very proud of me and pay me all sorts of compliments about being a good business woman.

It is these little variations in the moods and character of those we love that make us enjoy them more and more. I am never quite sure Jack what you will do next or how you will do it.

I am afraid, however, that you are too sure of me, that I am too dependable perhaps, to really be interesting. You seem to know that given a certain set of circumstances I will always react in a certain manner.

Some day I will surprise you, dear, by doing something totally unexpected.

Don't, you know that although I may make great mistakes in judgments yet I never do things that I think would hurt or anger you. Naturally of course I claim the right to help a friend whenever I feel it necessary without consulting you just as you have helped your friends many times probably without consulting me.

Sometimes I think it is not the big troubles that "mess up" (as you would call it) the success of married life, but it is the little annoyances that come up every day that keep ones nerves frazzled and ones viewpoint warped, that makes two people hate each other who once loved. I am very glad that you have found out one thing by going back home without me and that is how impossible it would be to have your mother live with us. She would not be happy for a moment nor would she let us be happy. I have always thought that the Puritans must have been very uncomfortable to live with. Their descendants are always so sure of their own righteousness and their own judgments. They can become your judge without questioning their own fitness in any way.

You say, dear, we will try very hard when we get old to remember how prone old people are to think they know so much more than the younger ones.

I don't blame your mother for doing what she wants to, when she wants to, and how she wants to, but I do blame her for insisting that we should do exactly as she thinks best for us as well as for herself.

I think my own dear mother understands the viewpoint of the younger generation, for although I have said nothing to her about the letter that your mother wrote me, yet when we were talking yesterday and I suggested that she live with us in the old house after we purchased it, he told me she was not going to live with either of her daughters.

"I know we will get along and love each other much better if we do not live together," she said a little apologetically. I think mother has decided to travel and then come back to live in one of the hotels near us.

Will you please tell Syd that I am going to write him a long letter and I do hope he will come over here with you, but until I see him, he must always remember that I consider him my best friend.

LESLIE.

SHEIK CLOTHES LOSE OUT

By Albert Apple

A craze for thick woolen shirts is spreading like wildfire among college and high school lads, the country over. Colors are gaudy—such as red and black checkerboards. The idea seems to be to imitate the Mackinaw coats of lumberjacks.

It's the healthiest sign we've observed in the nation's youth for many a moon.

It suggests there's a reaction against what might be summed up as sheikism and lounge-lizardism.

With great glee, old-timers will observe the waning of an effeminate tendency in a considerable number of American youths. The lads want to look like "he-men" again.

It's too early to use the bromide that the country is saved. But sanity is returning when youth strongly demonstrates the traits of virile, sensible manhood.

Styles are pretty good weathervanes of national tendencies. Conditions were very healthy years ago when boys in their late teens wore flannel shirts, rough peg-top trousers, maybe chewed tobacco on the sly, read Nick Carter and from the east went west in summertime to work in wheat fields for winter spending money.

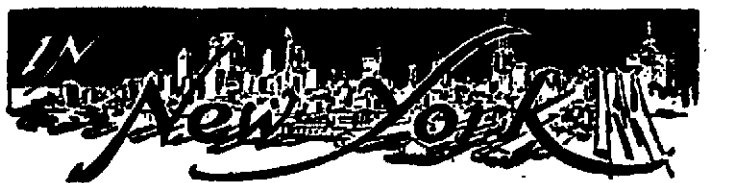

They belonged to a virile generation.

Their ragtime was healthier than the modern decadent form of jazz blues. There wasn't as much synthetic gin in those days.

The typical Nick Carter reader was a much more promising lad than the sissy who doted on namby-pamby Rollo books.

Signs of decadence show up periodically in all civilizations. But the pendulum in America always swings back to normal. It may very well be that youth's sudden craze for rough lumberjack shirts means the beginning of the end of jazz life in entirety.

The "Covered Wagon" type of fiction and movie is eclipsing the sheik type. This also reflects a change in the audiences, especially youth.

New York, Dec. 8.—See-sawing up and down Broadway saw Tom Meighan, on his way to Birmingham, Ala., there to do scenes for a movie of a story written by Jack Bethen, a Birmingham newspaperman. . . . Saw Al Woods, the bedroom farce impresario. Forget now whether he was on the way to England, or just returning—he does both so often.—Saw Eddie Sutherland, a young nabob who was my idea of the world's worst screen actor, now a successful director. . . . Saw Helen McKellar, the most wronged woman of the stage except Florence Reed, and methinks she looks lovelier on the street than behind the footlights. . . . Saw Eugene Frey, a baritone, making his first New York appearance after a tour of the country. He looks more the part of a screen villain than that of an angster. . . . Saw George Rasely, as sweet a tenor as sings on Broadway. . . . Saw Tote, the clown, looking as lugubrious as a pall-bearer. . . . Seeing more short skirts than for several months and girls with ugliest legs seem to wear them. . . . Seeing far less fur-bearing animals than roamed Broadway last year. . . .

Barney Gallant is going to open a new supper club in Greenwich Village. When his former place was closed a while back, all the other supper clubs in MacDougal Alley lost patronage. Business in the village thrives through continuity, it seems.

A book shop in our Bohemia. A boy of 14 enters, wearing heavy-rimmed glasses and an Eton skull-cap. He glances over the titles and the young clerk makes several suggestions. "Oh, no!" he answers. "I want something for mother. She's quite sophisticated, you know. She has just finished 'The Tattooed Countess.' I read it myself a week ago and thought it wasn't half bad. How's this new thing by Ben Hecht? I imagine mother would like it."

He bought four books. After he had gone the clerk told me that he was the son of a learned man who wrote a boy's version of the Bible so his boys could understand it.

Life isn't so drab in the Bronx county jail. In front there is a park, in the rear a theater where music is played, on one side busy Tremont avenue and on the other a row of apartment houses with an ample supply of radio loud speakers. And for one hour each Wednesday and Friday an organ grinder entertains without hope of pay. Screens over the jail windows prevent inmates from tossing him coins.

FABLES ON HEALTH—A JOB FOR THE COOK

To teach children, and grown men as well, to like foods that are good for them is a job that centers upon the cook herself.

Thus Mrs. Jones of Anytown sought to vary the type of vegetables served at each meal, and also to alter the style of cooking them. Such frequent changes in variety and appearance and taste are to be recommended.

A list of vegetables, arranged for various days, can be jotted down by the housewife who, on some days, can cream them and on another prepare them without sauce and upon another combine two or three of them into one dish and secure a considerable variety, from day to day.

At writing. But do not try to ridicule or be sarcastic. This trait, often noted in persons born this day, can easily be corrected.

Your sense of humor can be made profitable, and you can make many friends by being more jovial.

CONSTIPATION OVERCOME
The use of FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS will bring speedy relief from constipation if taken promptly. They are purely vegetable and act on the liver. Mr. John D. McComb, Lucas Co. Home, Toledo, Ohio, writes: Have used FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS in severe cases of constipation to which I am a subject and found them beneficial." FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS are easy to take, leave no unpleasant after effects. Try them.

TOM GIBBONS FIT FOR RING

Favorite in go with Kid Norfolk Tuesday Night

New York, Dec. 8.—Tom Gibbons and Kid Norfolk finished the strenuous part of their training for their 15 round match at Madison Square Garden next Tuesday night as the feature of the annual Christmas fund benefit show.

A crowd of several thousand watched Gibbons in his final workout and critics were unanimous in proclaiming the St. Paul light heavyweight to be the perfect fighting title. Tom put the finishing touch to his ring work by boxing five rounds with Jim Montgomery and Al Rende, two heavyweights, after which his negro rival, Norfolk, exhibited his wares in a brief sparring session.

Both athletes are close to the required weight, 175 pounds. Gibbons continued to rule a marked favorite among critics, but a strengthening of support for Norfolk has been reflected in shortening of odds within the past few days.

Tex Rickard predicted recently that on the basis of the advance sale to date, a capacity crowd would pack the garden for the most important heavyweight encounter held in the historic arena for some time.

New Salem Defeats Hazen

New Salem, N. D., Dec. 8.—Playing spectacular basketball New Salem trounced Hazen 25 to 5. In a speedy, well-played game, after the first half Hazen did not have an outside chance. The New Salem players had possession of the ball most of the time and took it through it will. When Hazen got possession of the ball they were unable to carry it through and they were at a loss to know what to do. Hazen again showed that he was a man to be feared. He connected for six field goals and was in the play all of the time. E. Jones played excellent ball also. He connected six times and Gander put the ball through the net once. The other two points came on free throws. Hazen was shut out the first half and during the second half they made five points.

The line up:
New Salem Hazen
E. Jones RF Dolan
R. Jones LF Karges
Boman LG Joen
Gander RG Brann
Schwartz RG Edwards
Field goals: New Salem 13; Hazen 2. Free throws: New Salem 2 out of 8; Hazen 1 out of 6.

BY JOE WILLIAMS
The belief is quite universal that elections, taken indiscriminately, will do little toward increasing the population of any given community.

Another notion on which the world at large is pretty thoroughly sold is that Robert Lyre Jones of Atlanta is the best amateur golfer this side of Mars.

These ancient sentences are designed to introduce the writer's classification of the 10 leading amateurs in American golf.

Jones is undoubtedly the ace of the deck. As a matter of truth the young southerner has been the best amateur in the game for the past four years. It just happened that it was not his luck to win the championship until this year. His qualifications are so well known as to make amplified comment superfluous.

The business of classifying the rest of the field is beset with complexities. Personal estimate of abilities must play a deciding part in most instances. Only a few of the ranking stars took part in all the major events. This leaves the reviewer but little to work with.

Von Elm Rated Second
Many of the old stars have begun to slip. A year ago Chick Evans return to Fargo is set for January 10 at Jamestown. The journey will take place during the Christmas holidays so that the members of the team will not be kept from their classes.

Billy Evans Says

Pitchers are not supposed to shine at the bat.

For that reason it is a rather interesting coincidence that the two real batting leaders of the American League in 1924, began their major league careers at that position.

Bob Ruth, past champion of 1924, began his brilliant career as a pitcher.

still held his position as second best to Jones. This year the Chicagoan has dropped to fourth. Chick is still a splendid shot-maker but his record of having lost twice in a row in the first round of the national cannot be overlooked.

In Evans' place we have advanced George Von Elm, a youngster from the far west. Von Elm not only went to the finals against Jones this year but showed unmistakable signs of big-league ability at Flossmoor a year ago. What's more, Von Elm's rate, fighting qualities give him a prominent advantage in match play. His advance has been spectacular. Two years ago he did not rank with the first 10.

To Jess Sweetser goes third position. This may provoke criticism. Sweetser had a bad season. He did not even qualify for the national. But those who appreciate the varieties of golf know this is not important. Sweetser was good enough to win the title in 1922 and he reached the finals the following fall. That proves his class.

Marston Lands Fifth
Chick Evans is fourth and Marston, on his skill as a match player rather than his genius as a shot-maker, is placed fifth. The Philadelphia has a knack for being at his best in the pinches. Though er before it was discovered that he had even greater talents as a batsman.

When Babe quit pitching and took to the outfield, so that his club might have the benefit of his super-batting daily, he was recognized as the best southpaw in the American League.

Charlie Jamieson of the Cleveland club, runnerup to Ruth, threw them with his left "super" as a pitcher when he made his American League debut. Jamieson, however, failed to reach stardom as a pitcher as did Ruth.

Certainly Ruth and Jamieson believe the generally accepted impression that pitchers cannot hit. Each has an entirely different style at the plate.

Despite the popularity of the open game in football it is a very easy matter to find any number of coaches who are of the opinion that the forward pass is being overdone.

The forward pass is the chief weapon in the open game. Successful aerial play has been the contributing factor to most of the upsets in a season jammed with reversals of form.

Many of the coaches who feel that more severe restrictions should be placed on the open game are those who knew football in the old days.

A recent suggestion by a well known coach that the number of forward passes permissible in a game be limited to 10 is rather interesting if not seemingly logical.

Unquestionably a number of coaches, defeated by long forward passes in the last few minutes of play, hold no love for the promiscuous tossing of the ball through the air.

The impression prevails that football is getting too much like its winter brother, basketball. No doubt the forward pass will be the subject of much discussion when coaches and rule makers get together.

Should the star college ball player who has designs on the big league indulge in football?

Recently in discussing that phase of sport with a famous football coach, he came out strongly against the pairing of sports, if the athlete had big league ideas.

"Football and baseball have nothing in common, unless the player simply has the thought of his alma mater at heart and the ability to help it."

"Very often what we regard as a minor injury from a football standpoint, is a catastrophe to a ball player."

"Football is a strenuous game that takes much out of the athlete. Big league baseball, covering six months of play, calls for greater physical perfection."

"Well do I recall the case of a famous college pitcher, an equally great football player, who suffered a minor football injury to his pitching arm that eventually ended his career as a ball player."

It is a singular fact that very few football stars, who also shone on the diamond, have been able to make the grade as big leaguers.

"Pitcher Beall of the Yanks is the best looking right hander to break into the American League in years," says Connie Mack.

English Billiardist Runs String of 669 Buttons Without Giving His Opponent a Single Shot

This photo shows Ben Newman, the Willie Hargre of English Billiards, playing a shot in a recent match with Alex Smith, a supposedly formidable challenger. In this match, however, Newman played the part of the innocent bystander. He was merely a spectator. Newman ran 669 points up without giving Smith a single chance to make a button.

Where, through inadvertence, evidence is introduced and no finding is made, in an equity case, upon a material question, that bears directly upon the amount of damages awarded the defendant, the case will not be reversed generally on that ground alone, but should be remanded and reopened for the taking of testimony and for findings on the matter omitted.

2. For reasons stated in the opinion, it is held, that it was not an abuse of discretion to reopen the case and permit defendant to introduce more testimony after both sides had rested, but before judgment had been ordered, following Fried V. Olson, 23 N. D. 381, 133 N. W. 1041.

3. Evidence is properly admitted to prove notice, given by vendee to vendor of warranted personal property to the effect that the property does not conform to the warranty.

4. When a reversal is ordered on appeal and a new trial is granted, it is proper to tax the costs of the first trial against the then losing party, who is also loser on the second trial, when the reversal and the new trial are not made necessary by any act or omission of the other party.

The NILE

It flows through old hushed Egypt and its sands.
Like some grave mighty thought threading a dream.
And times and things, as in that vision, seem
Keeping along it their eternal stands—
Caves, pillars, pyramids, the shepherd bands
That roamed through the young world, the glory extreme
Of high Sesostris, and that southern beam,
The laughing queen that caught the world's great hands.
Then comes a mightier silence, stern and strong,
As of a world left empty of its throng,
And the void weighs on us; and then we wake,
And hear the fruitful steam lapsing along
Twixt villages, and think how we shall take
Our own calm journey on for human sake.

—Leigh Hunt.

of Goings' brother, George, Nov. 18. They were in Goings' automobile and said they were driving to Minneapolis. The morning of Nov. 20, at 2 a. m., Goings' automobile was approached by a police gun squad in the northeast section of Minneapolis and two men were seen to jump out and run away. Police gave chase but failed to catch them.

A woman was in the car and her clothes and the car were blood stained. She was unable to explain the circumstances leading up to her being found in the car and subsequently she was sentenced to a term in the workhouse for vagrancy.

During the past week police have found that a travelers' check of Goings' was cashed in Minneapolis and investigation disclosed that he had about $300 in checks and cash when he left Carrington. According to George Goings of Carrington, his brother planned to go on to his home in Cleveland, Ohio, after leaving Minneapolis.

Step Toward Solution of Mystery Taken

Minneapolis, Dec. 8.—With the arrest in Sioux City, Iowa, today of B. Clancy, alias "Buck" O'Connor, Minneapolis police believe they have taken an important step toward solution of the mystery surrounding the disappearance of John Goings, whose blood stained automobile was found here Nov. 18. Clancy, said to be a former convict, will be taken to Carrington, N. D., where he is wanted in connection with the disappearance of Goings.

Clancy, Goings and Ed Helm, of Minneapolis, left Carrington where they had been working on the farm

They had food— but they did not know how to eat it

Let the southwest monsoon be delayed but a few days . . . and in some district or other in India the crops are ruined. A famine occurs.

When the attempt was first made to relieve such districts, a remarkable thing happened! Rice eaters, ignorant of other foods, died sooner than make use of the wheat that was offered them. Death was preferable to the unknown. Nor would wheat eaters eat rice. . . .

Incredible! Yet here, today, progressive people in a progressive country are very wary about risking themselves off the beaten path. They are suspicious of innovations. They leave them for others to try out.

Without advertising, many improvements common today would have failed to surmount the conservatism of our fathers. But alert merchants and manufacturers told about their products in the daily papers. The mystery surrounding them was dissipated. People became interested . . . and in this interest forgot their first doubts.

Read the advertisements. They let you know about new things, where to get them, how much they cost. Without them we would live in complete ignorance of many things that serve to make life less laborious, more comfortable, happier.

WOULD TAX N.D. INDUSTRIES

State industries of North Dakota should be taxed the same as private industries, in the opinion of Oscar Bachman, county commissioner of Burleigh county, who announced his intention of putting the proposition before members of the legislature which convenes here next month.

The Bank of North Dakota once paid tax to Burleigh county, but the same as other banks, and the state mill and elevator should pay tax to Grand Forks county, and both should meet the regular state taxes, he believes. The same, he said, is true of the Drake mill or other industries.

Mr. Bachman bases his opinion on the belief that the local governments in which dominates the industries are situated should receive support from all industries, and on the ground that the state industries which are competing with private business should be on exactly the same status as private industries and therefore pay taxes. In the latter instance, he declared, it would aid in determining the financial success or failure of the industries, which were established as experiments, to have them taxed.

From this point on the classification becomes little more than guesswork, with our personal inclinations favoring Harrison Johnston, who scored a notable victory in the western amateur; Dexter Cummings, who represented in the national intercollegiate; and Rudolph Knapp, who lost to Jones in the third round at Merion.

coaches who are of the opinion that the forward pass is being overdone.

The forward pass is the chief weapon in the open game. Successful aerial play has been the contributing factor to most of the upsets in a season jammed with reversals of form.

Many of the coaches who feel that more severe restrictions should be placed on the open game are those who know football in the old days.

A recent suggestion by a well-known coach that the number of forward passes permitted in a game be limited to 10 is rather interesting if not seemingly logical.

Unquestionably a number of coaches, defeated by long forward passes in the last few minutes of play, had no voice for the proposition of limiting the ball through the air.

The impression prevails that football is getting too much like its winter brother, basketball. No doubt the forward pass will be the subject of much discussion when coaches and rule makers get together.

Should the star college ball player who has deserted the big league college football?

Recently in discussing that phase of football with a famous football coach, an argument strongly against the passing of punts, if the athlete has any brains.

Football and baseball have nothing in common, unless the player simply has the talent of his aim and the ability to throw.

What we regard as a minor league from a football standpoint is a catastrophe to a ball player.

It is a strenuous game that takes a lot out of the athlete. Big league football, covering six months of play, calls for greater physical perfection.

Well do I recall the case of a famous college pitcher, an equally great football player, who suffered a minor football injury to his pitching arm that eventually ended his career as a ball player.

It is a singular fact that very few football stars, who at a glance on the diamond, have been able to make the grade as big leaguers.

And times and things, as in that vision, seem

GAIN MADE BY SHOALS PLAN, SENATOR SAYS

Secretary of War and Underwood Declared by Latter Near Agreement

COOLIDGE SEES HIM

Washington, Dec. 8.—Senator Underwood, after a two hour conference with Secretary Weeks today, said that he and the Secretary were not widely divided on the Muscle Shoals question and that he would be willing to accept the Weeks amendment.

Among the objections raised by the Secretary of War, one dealt with the finances of the operations of Muscle Shoals and said unless the bonds which should be issued are guaranteed by the government, they would practically be worthless.

He declared that it would be unwise to require the operator to attempt to produce a maximum of 40,000 tons of nitrate within the four year limit set by the bill unless it was first learned that the fertilizer could be sold profitably.

The Secretary said that next July 1 was too short a limit to obtain suitable lessees for the property.

COUNTY LOSES TAX CASES IN HIGH COURT

No Authority to Tax Corporate Excess, Decision of Supreme Court

The supreme court today affirmed the decision of the district court of Burleigh county, holding that the county could not collect corporate excess tax from the International Harvester Company and the Standard Oil Company. About $150,000 in taxes were involved.

The suits were instituted by the county with F. O. Hellstrom, as special attorney. It was claimed for the county that under North Dakota laws the corporate excess, or intangible value of the property over the taxable value, could be assessed, and taxes were sought for a period of years from the Standard Oil Company and the International Harvester Company.

The defendants contended that there was no statute under which the intangible property of a foreign corporation could be assessed, or could be allocated to Burleigh county. The defendants were represented by E. R. Lewis of Chicago and Zuger & Tillotson of Bismarck and in the Standard Oil case by Conny Young and Burnett of Fargo and O'Hare and Cox of Bismarck. Several other cases, according to defense attorneys, depend on the construction in these cases. The opinion of the court covered both cases.

EXCLUSION OF JAPANESE HIT BY MR. WOODS

Called Disaster of First Magnitude by Former Ambassador to Japan

Atlanta, Dec. 8.—"The Japanese exclusion act was an international disaster of the first magnitude, a disaster to American diplomacy in the far east; a disaster to religion and effective work of our American churches in Japan," Cyrus E. Woods, former United States ambassador to Japan said in a letter sent the Federal Council of Churches in session here for reading last night.

The exclusion act also was brought to the attention of the council by Dr. A. K. Reischauer, Tokio, representing the National Christian council of Japan, who recommended the appointment of a "high commission" composed of "representative Americans and Japanese" to work out a readjustment of the present situation.

"That which now needs to be done is to follow the suggestion of Secretary Hughes," said Mr. Woods. "He asked that Japan be placed on the quota list. This would admit only 146 immigrants annually until July 1927, and thereafter only 150."

"This amount is negligible and I am sure in the enforcement of such a provision America will have the legal cooperation of the Japanese government."

"The 'ultimate consequences' of the act cannot yet be 'fully forecast,' he continued, adding that what we do or fail to do, during the coming year or two, will determine the degree of the disaster."

The right handling of the question in the near future, he stated, would go "far toward wiping out the harm," which, he said, has been done.

"Failure to take appropriate action will confirm, deepen and extend it," he predicted.

"The purpose of congress, was, no doubt, to stop further Japanese immigration on the assumption that a flood of Japanese was still entering the United States. Congress could not have realized that Japan accepted the principle of exclusion in 1908. Since that date, the Japanese government has been loyally cooperating with the government of the United States in carrying out that policy."
